Why is dental care so important?

It's not just about keeping your smile looking good. Good oral health makes speaking, eating and drinking effortless, and your oral health is a vital part of your overall well-being. The fact is, regular cleanings don't just protect your teeth and gums better than you can do by yourself – a dental exam offers a view into your overall health.

Preventive dental services prevent oral health problems that can affect the rest of your body, and catch other issues before they turn into time consuming and expensive problems. Plus, dentists can spot symptoms of more than 120 other diseases – like diabetes, heart disease, kidney disease and certain cancers. You might not notice these early signs, but your dentist and hygienist will. That's why it's so important to have regular dental exams and cleanings. When you have dental insurance, you're more likely to get the dental care you need. That's why our plans have rich coverage for preventive services – and why we make them so affordable and hassle-free.
